

10/523 901

Rec'd PCN TO 02 FEB 2005

Abstract

An apparatus for determining physiological data is distinguished in being suitable for determining age. For 5 picking up the physiological data, a sensor is used. In particular, the apparatus is configured for measuring the pupil size, which is a good parameter for distinguishing age. Preferably, this parameter is correlated with further measured values, in order to put the age determination on a reliable
10 basis.

(Figure 1)